Soldiers' Bodies Now at Wharf.

Up the Coffins of the Buried.

There was trouble at the Nuuanu cemetery yesterday during the exhuming of the bodies of thirty-four dead soldiers who have died in Honolulu since the commencement of the war at one mile, won by Lord Beresford's with Spain and the subsequent attempt to suppress the insurrection in the Phil-Mr. Rhodes, who has charge of the handling of the Nation's dead and is at the head of the burial corps aboard the transport, went to work in Nuuanu cemetery soon after the arrival of the Hancock on Monday. He had sent up to the cemetery at once and put his corps at work.

A number of Japanese were hired to assist in the transfer, and it fell to their let to wield the spade and pick and do the heavy labor leading up to the uncovering of the caskets and bringing them up to the surface of the ground. They opened the caskets, removed the bodies, transferred them to new caskets, sealed them up again tightly, boxed them in redwood outer cases and the box.

Yesterday morning certain of the Japanese began to wish they had not undertaken their jobs. From some of the caskets an odor came which caused them to turn their heads away, and finally they announced they would not work any longer. The other Japanese speedily fell into line with the arguments of their leaders and all quit. It is said also that they would not agree to continue work unless they were paid valued at many thousands of dollars. at the rate of $5 a day.

Mr. Rhodes speedily got rid of his found who agreed to finish the work. in the Nome country. They stayed with Mr. Rhodes until the last grave had delivered up its dead. of Health before the bodies will be alowed entrance to the United States at taken to supply for its dead heroes of land and sea. They were especially designed and constructed, and answer every purpose of the burial corps.
